

GASOLINE TANK TAKES FIRE

And Fire Alarm is Turned in Saturday—R. Leavell's Car.

An alarm of fire was turned in from the Davis garage back of the Penny-ropal building Saturday, which proved to be the gasoline tank in Richard Leavell's Cadillac touring car. The fire was finally controlled without throwing water. The damage was not serious.

AT TABERNACLE FRIDAY NIGHT

The New York Metropolitan Company will appear at the Tabernacle in this city next Friday night, March 2, when a very delightful program will be rendered. The South Bend, Ind., Journal of recent date says:

"Axel Skovgaard, known to the musical world as 'The Danish Violinist,' was the principal member of the company. The fact that his hands are insured for $50,000 and that he plays a genuine Stradivarius violin valued at $13,000, is enough in itself to make him a distinguished personality, but in addition to these he is really a master musician.

Another member of the company whose voice endeared her to the people of South Bend and Raymond, was Mary Maiben Allen. Miss Allen has a contralto voice of splendid quality and of wonderful range. Another quality which makes her voice delightful is that Miss Allen possesses the rare quality in singers of being able to enunciate her words so that they were very clear and distinct. A number greatly enjoyed was the duet rendered by Miss Allen and Susan Emma Drought, lyric soprano. The selection was the Flower Duet, taken from the charming Oriental opera, 'Madame Butterfly' and the young ladies were beautifully gowned in appropriate costumes. Later Miss Allen appeared in place of Aubry N. Engle, the baritone of the company, who was unable to appear on account of illness. Her rendition of 'Oh Dry Those Tears' was especially suited to bring out the sweet tones of her voice. In another number which should have been taken by Mr. Engle, she appeared in concert with Mildred Haynes and they gave 'Oh, Nights of Love' from 'The Tales of Hoffman.'

KNOTT AND M'KENZIE

Statesmen Who Were Practical Jokers, Like Overgrown Boys.

The Courier-Journal contains this reference to two of the best known Kentucky statesmen of 30 years ago: "Gov. Proctor Knott's story-telling was one of the least of his accomplishments. He was a poet, a scholar, something of a sculptor, and he made very good free-hand cartoons on current topics. In this connection is recalled the lively passage at arms through the public prints between Judge Milton J. Durham, of Danville, Controller of the Treasury under the first Cleveland administration, and Gov. Knott.

Judge Durham had written a letter to a friend in Kentucky bemoaning the fact that the old Commonwealth had fallen into a rut, and was in danger of going to the demeriton how-ows, and expressing the hope that some leader could be found who would put new life into the old State. Gov. Knott resented this statement, and wrote a red-hot reply, scathing in denunciation, keen in sarcasm and abounding in wit. The passages at arms are matters of public record. Not so as to a drawing by Gov. Knott, which was kept for many years on file in the archives of the 'kitchen cabinet.'

This drawing contained a good likeness of the Controller, standing half way between the White House and the Kentucky capitol, and men with ropes both in Washington and Frankfort, attached to the Controller, and giving a mighty tug. Underneath in the Governor's handwriting was the quotation:

"How happy I'd be with either, were 'tother dear charmer away."

Secretary of State McKenzie was no slouch himself with a pencil. Gov. Knott surprised the Secretary of State one day while he was in the very act of drawing a cartoon. It was the picture of a donkey looking into a miniature lake on which a number of ducks were swimming. The Secretary of State had written under it: "Proctor Knott fishing for ducks." The Governor took the paper and with a few strokes of the pencil made a fairly good likeness of himself with a pole and line extended lakeward. Then he wrote: "And his friend, Jim McKenzie, looking on."

Ordinance Held Void.

The Appellate Court held that the ordinance passed by the City of Hopkinsville, imposing a license tax on dealers of tobacco in that city, is valid. The suit was brought by the Tandy & Fairleigh Tobacco Company to declare the ordinance invalid, as it is claimed unconstitutional. The court holds, however, that it meets the requirements of the constitution and the statutes. The ordinance imposes a license tax of from $25 to $50 for dealers of tobacco in Hopkinsville.

Victim of Tuberculosis.

Letitia VanHooser, aged 41 years, died at the Western State Hospital Saturday of tuberculosis. She was from this county and was received at the hospital about two weeks ago. The interment took place near Cerulean Sunday.

Hearings begun yesterday by the Legislature will be continued until Wednesday. Representatives of Fiscal courts and cities today and bankers and other citizens tomorrow are scheduled to appear. By Thursday the general assembly will settle down to actual work on the thirteen revenue bills already introduced.

When Clock Gets Out of Order.
If your clock gets out of order, try lubricating the works by the fumes from a piece of wadding soaked in paraffin. Set the wadding inside the case under the works; unless the fumes are actually out of order the fumes will act on the machinery. It is quite a simple but a tried remedy.

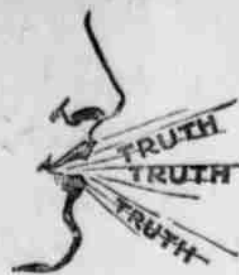

Plant Beds.

The farmers in all sections of the county are now burning and sowing plant beds. From general indications a large tobacco crop will be grown this year.

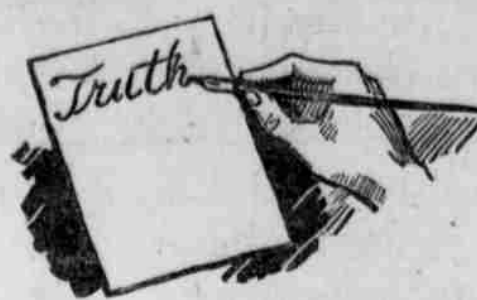

MRS. WALLACE DEAD.

Mrs. Mary D. Wallace, mother of Mr. Alex Wallace, died at Cerulean Saturday.

A Southerner Says It—It's True

He Speaks It—

Writes It—

and Thinks It—

It seems somehow that the love of truth is inborn—in every Southerner and it sticks right close to him for all his days—just like a life-long friend!

That's why, friends, when I hear people praising me all over the South—saying "SOVEREIGN is King of Them All"—well, it is true—that's all.

For example, I heard one gentleman say the other day:—"Here is the finest cigarette I ever smoked. I never buy any other. The finest product of Virginia and Carolina tobacco, in all its mildness, and sweetness and mellowness."

Yes—It's great to be a SOVEREIGN. It's fine to have real breeding back of you, to be brought up in a fine, white, healthy home,—and to hear so many nice things from so many friends down South here among you all. And the reason is just this—it's because—

You Folks of the South KNOW good 'blood!
You Folks of the South KNOW good tobacco!

No doubt of it all. Good breeding does count. Quality does tell. So, let's you and me be the real friends that we ought to be. And, here is something more for you to think about—

I am guaranteed by The American Tobacco Co. —Buy me. If you don't like me return me to your dealer and get your money back. I have said it. A Southern gentleman is known the world over for keeping his word, and I have given you mine.

FOR THE GENTLEMAN OF THE SOUTH
"King of Them All"

WHO WAS GEORGE WASHINGTON?

He was the oldest of five children? His army when he first took charge was 14,000 men, 9,000 of them from Massachusetts.

As commander-in-chief of the army he drew $500 a month.

Of the sixty-nine electoral votes cast for the first president, he got sixty-nine.

He was 57 years old when he entered upon the office of President.

He always had his hair powdered at public receptions and never shook hands with any one at such times.

He was very successful as a raiser of wheat and tobacco, and, in addition, carried on brickyards and fisheries interests.

He was married to Mrs. Martha Curtis Jan. 6, 1759, and for several years they led the simple life on their Mount Vernon estate.

At his inauguration he wore a full suit of fine cloth made by his own servants and the dresses of his wife were also woven on the plantation.

He was 21 years old when Gov. DuRoi sent him on a perilous journey to Ohio to find out the strength of the French, which he accomplished handily.

At 13 he was the strength marvel of the neighborhood, being abundantly able to outwrestle, outrun, outleap, outrun quoits and outtoss iron bars over any boy of his age in Virginia.—Evansville Courier.

Catch the Idea?

The March Woman's Home Companion.

In the March Woman's Home Companion Mary Heaton Vorse has a love story entitled "The Great God," an interesting indictment of the lives of many American women of the wealthier class. There are many other good stories and a large number of excellent articles and special features.

"Out of the Shadow of Debt," by an anonymous writer, gives the dramatic personal experience of a young couple in meeting their obligations and shows how debt itself is nothing more than a bad habit which may be broken. In "Scenario Writing" Jasper Ewing Brady explains the requirements for a successful moving picture author and how to attain them. "The Delicate Child," by Roger H. Dennett, M. D., is a sensible, helpful article on how to make such a child well and keep it so. "My Memories," by Louise Homer, is an autobiographical sketch by a great singer whose musical success was won in the United States. There are also articles by Laura Spencer Porter, C. H. Claudy, the automobile expert; Lillian Brewster, Adeline T. Thomson and Charlotte F. Boldtmann.

The short stories include "The Message," by Emily Sargent Lewis, "The Charmer," by Sophie, and "Cry-Baby," by Mabel Dill. Sinclair Lewis completes his novel, "The Innocents."

Fashions are discussed by Grace Margaret Gould, who gives many new ideas for spring costumes. The departments of "Cooking," "Handicraft," and the section for younger readers are valuable and entertaining, and the picture section, both in color and Alco Gravure, completes a decidedly good number.
